-Gold(&mkts) Charts R Us-

●●●● GCRU #429 on January 12, 2011 (in its 9th year)

Welcome to Gold Charts R Us.

Gold fell quickly last week, dropping over $50, from Monday's record high to Friday's close. This was not unusual following the significant 100% rise in gold over the last two years. Gold's been rebounding this week, along with silver and the shares.

Gold and silver have basically been hit with profit taking, a stronger U.S. dollar and on signs of a better recovering economy. This short-term trend and the volatility is poised to continue. This is normal considering the current environment and it coincides with the timing for a downward correction in the gold price.

The bull market rise in gold entered its stronger second phase over a year ago, and the most gold has corrected since then was 13.30% last February... almost a year ago. This is saying, if gold corrects similarly now, we could see gold reach the $1230 level, which also happens to be near our major support level.

The point is, don't fear corrections. We can short if it proves to be useful, and we can buy big at major intermediate levels. There are many ways to take advantage of the moves.

But before we take a look at this week's guidelines and what to do, we'd like to again review gold's big picture. Since there are so many historical aspects coming together at the same time, which are fueling gold's mega bull market, we'll be covering different points that're involved in the weeks ahead. This is just one of them and it's very important...

BIG PIC: World power shifts. That's been the story for thousands of years and it's a natural phenomenon. Throughout history the one constant has always been change.

There were the Egyptians, the Greeks, the Roman Empire and so on, and they were all great powers in their day. In more recent centuries, Spain ruled the world. Many other countries also had their time of glory like Portugal, France, Holland and Britain. Over the past 90 years, the U.S. has held the top position.

Interestingly, holding on to the top position has only lasted about 100 years on average. Of course, there have been exceptions but that's been the general rule of thumb, historically speaking.

In most cases, what usually happened was also interestingly similar... each world power initially started from somewhat humble beginnings but the people worked hard and eventually the country or empire became great.

They then began to take over other territories, gaining world dominance in one way or another, usually involving wars. As a result, the power country became spread too thin, spending lots of money along the way.

Meanwhile, the power citizens began to enjoy a higher standard of living, but as time passed they became spoiled. The people wanted more, but with the power country running low on money, it usually turned to inflation and the debasement of the money to cover the growing costs.

That marked the beginning of the end for the super power.

This process didn't happen from one day to the next. It was always gradual, but the similarities are striking in almost every case. It's a reflection of human behavior and it's happened over and over. Sound familiar? It does. As we've often pointed out, the U.S. is, unfortunately, following in the footsteps of the former great powers. The similarities are almost spooky but they're happening.

At the same time, China has been rising fast, and it too is beginning to follow the old familiar pattern. The Chinese started from humble beginnings and they've been working very hard for the past 30 years. They've made amazing strides and they've become a rich and powerful country.

We also know that Chinese citizens are enjoying a higher standard of living. They now own more cars, for instance, than any other country. Along with this newfound prosperity we're also seeing a change in attitude... a new self confidence and growing Chinese nationalism. On the international front, they've become more assertive, their global influence is rapidly growing and they're clearly doing their own thing.

Almost always, the current world power's currency is the currency that's commonly used in international transactions and for global reserves. And here too we're seeing a shift.

Increasingly, China is making its own deals with other countries, shunning the U.S. dollar and using the yuan instead. This past year, the big emerging markets were by far the highest contributors to global growth.

From a historical standpoint, what's happening is really fascinating. The pendulum is swinging from West to East and there's going to be many repercussions during this long-term transition.

This power shift is going to affect many markets in a big way. It already has and those are the mega trends you want to be invested in for big, long-term gains.

The ultimate winner in this shift, for example, will be gold. China's demand for gold has been growing, China is adding gold to its reserves and so are many other emerging countries.

As these countries continue to grow and prosper, the gold price will keep heading higher. The ongoing major decline in the U.S. dollar will only add fuel to gold's fire. Other commodities will also do well. Again, as demand from these emerging countries continues to grow, you'll see the base metals, resources, oil and other commodities also rise much further.

Countries that are rich in raw materials will reap the benefits too, along with the new emerging nations. These countries will also be good investment bets looking out over the long-term. And countries that are in slow declines will not do so well.

The bottom line... this is where your primary focus should be. These markets have generally been the top performers over the past decade and there's no reason to believe these mega trends are going to be changing any time soon.

Sure, there will be normal ups and downs along the way, but the mega trends will keep marching forward and you'll want to stay with them. As Jim Rogers wrote in his book on commodities, bull markets in commodities have lasted between 17 to 22 years going back over the past 400 years. This one started about 10 years ago, which means there's still several years to go before it reaches maturity, based on the historical average.

This is a clear reminder to keep in the back of our minds when trading... go with the major trend and don't get left behind.

For now though, here's our bottom line for the week...

Tech Talk

Lots of emotion in the market this week as gold had its biggest two day drop in 11 months! Gold was not the only one to decline... silver, oil, copper and many other commodities also fell. Although it's important to be aware of a potential further decline to avoid short term losses, keep in mind that these steep dips have happened regularly during the past years, only to see gold jump back up to record highs.

Standing back and looking at the technical picture, the gold price has formed a sideways band since October. This band has key resistance at its intraday record high at $1432.50 and key support at $1317.40.

Within the band, the important $1380 support area was broken this week. The gold price now has strong support at the $1355 level. This coincides with the Aug-Jan uptrend and the Dec support areas.

On the downside, if gold closes below $1355, it could fall to the bottom side of the sideways band near $1320.

On the upside, gold would show good short-term potential on a 2 dc above $1390. It could then rise to $1425. A 1 dc above $1425 would be a very bullish sign.

As another reminder to all, we are in a major bull market. Many times it is easy to lose sight of this as the price dips and/or rises from one day to the other. It's important to watch the different indicators, economic and technical, that will signal a buy or sell moment.

COMEX GOLD FEB FUTURES - DAILY - 6 MONTH VIEW

(GC2011G) N.Y. GOLD 11G DAILY 1/11/11 C= 1384.30

What does this tell us? Buy if gold breaks the January downtrend after a 2 dc at or above $1390, or if it dips and holds after a 2 dc at $1355. Buy big if gold breaks above the Dec-Jan downtrend after 1dc at or above $1425. Also, for all U hedgers out there, be ready to sell Feb short after a 2 dc below $1355. Place protective stops at 3 points above your entry level (approximately $1358) and cover half at $1335.

Many thanks for your notes, suggestions and nice comments. We appreciate it. We will try to implement many of these suggestions in the weeks ahead. And if you have more thoughts, we'd love to hear from you as it'll help us provide you with a better service.

| | | |
|--------------|--|--|
| Open trades: | Long at: | Initial entry price 1387.70 (Dec 01-10) Gamblers re-bought at 1396.70 and 1406.90; Traders rebought at 1412.20. |
| | Stop: | S/T: stop triggered; M/T: 1 dc below 1355 |
| | Profit targets: | 1425, 1440 &/or 1469, 1509 |
| New Recom: | If long, keep positions for now. If out, wait for break above Jan downtrend line 2 dc at or above 1390, or if dips and holds after 2dc above 1355. Sell short Feb after a 2 dc below 1355, stop at 3 points above entry level, cover half at 1335. | |
| Comment: | Keep in mind, a mini rise is likely in the making and could be worthwhile, but the intermediate trend is showing serious signs of maturity, which means we could see a healthy downward correction develop following the mini rebound rise. A triple top (Nov-Dec-Jan) is likely forming so keep a close eye on the guidelines. We were stopped out of some gold shares already. | |

| | Stop: | S/T: at 27.80; M/T: 1-dc below 27.80 |
| | Profit targets: | 32.50 &/or 33.75 |
| New Recom: | Gamblers keep positions. Traders sell half at mkt into strength to protect profits (if bought early). Place tight stop at 27.80 to protect rest of position. Buy again if dips and holds after 2 dc above 25.50, or if 2 dc above 30. Sell March short after 1 dc bel2 25.50, stop at 1.50 above entry level, cover half at 23. | |
| Comment: | Holding at uptrend line while Spinner is clearly oversold. Could be entering into a good short-term buy or a time to sell into strength. Wait for the signals. | |

SPINNER (3, 16, 16) -18.60 -7.713

|----------|---|
| Comment: | Correction imminent as confirmed by this week's action, but for now a bounce up is likely. HUI fell to bottom of Dec downchannel and while it dipped below Aug - Jan uptrend line it's now holding above it. Spinner is also oversold and is due for a small rise. Break above the new year downtrend line would confirm mini rise to possibly 575. On the downside, a 2 dc break below 530 would confirm decline. Keep tight stops on gold shares; wait for upside break and/or dip/decline to buy more! |

| | Profit targets: | 80 (if bought low) 88 &/or 89.45 &/or 92.50 &/or 94.80 |
| New Recom: | Keep your positions. Gamblers and Traders buy a bit at mkt. Others buy if breaks above Dec - Jan downtrend line after 1dc above 76. | |
| Comment: | A short rise is looking imminent as it's holding above both the Aug - Jan uptrend and above the October lows, while the Spinner is in an oversold area. Looking to form a Symetrical Triangle with potential upside target of 80. Take advantage of a possible short term rise. Meanwhile, keep M/T stop in case of a stronger decline as a potential Nov - Jan H&S top may be forming which could push price down. | |

Spinner: Spinner is an in-house momentum indicator (not always shown on charts). Momentum indicators use the rate of change in price to determine predominant energy flows. Spinner trading signals are generated when the faster timing line crosses above or below the slower confirming line. Upside crosses in the lower range of positive territory offer the most reliable signals for longs; downside crosses in the top range of negative territory for shorts. Avoid trading against the timing line, ie, buying/selling if the timing line is in corrective mode (against direction of trade) unless the confirming line is positioning for a new 'confirming cycle'. It's important to always be aware of location, direction & cycling phase of the confirming line. Spinner signals are more effective in trending mkt's than in trading ranges where indicators such as Stochastics & Williams %R should be used.
